

Georgina Hirsch
Year of Call: 2009

Georgina is a Senior Junior with specialisms in trade union and employment law, employment related tax, mediation and investigations.

Georgina joined the Bar in 2009 after a successful 15 year career as a solicitor. Her experience is reflected in performance well above her call. She has appeared in the Supreme Court in three cases, including the most significant case for trade union collective bargaining law this century.

She has been praised for her clear advice, persuasive advocacy, and excellent client service.

Georgina's judgment and wide career experience were recognised in 2024 by the Institute of Directors appointing her as a Commissioner on their Commission to develop a Code of Conduct for Directors.

She is Junior Counsel to the Attorney General (B Panel) and is ranked in Chambers & Partners and The Legal 500 for Employment and Telecoms Regulation.

Georgina has particularly wide experience in employment law work; both on an individual and collective basis. Recent notable cases include the trade union detriment appeal in Kostal UK (Ltd.) v Dunkley & others [2021] UKSC 47; The Supreme Court redundancy case of R (oao Palmer) v Northern Derbyshire Magistrate's Court [2023] UKSC 38; The Addison Lee employment status appeals, and acting for Coutts Bank – successfully defending claims of equal pay and associated Equality Act claims, as reported in The Times.

She has a growing practice as a mediator in employment disputes.

Georgina also has experience in general civil and commercial cases, as well as a growing tax practice focussing on employment status and employment related tax.

Georgina's telecoms work ranges from competition and regulatory work in the CAT and Court of Appeal to wayleaves actions.

During her time as a solicitor, Georgina obtained an MBA before spending her last 7 years as a solicitor working in-house as Director of Legal Services at what became the UK's largest union, with 2.2 million members covering engineering, transport, banking, health professionals, printers, construction workers, and many others. That experience gives her a unique insight into the full range of trade union related legal issues, not least the many problems arising from the Supreme Court's approach in the Kostal case.

In her earlier career she had spent 6 years in a Legal Aid firm, specialising in employment, personal Injury and Judicial Review gaining advocacy experience in ETs, CICA appeals, and interlocutory hearings. She then joined the Engineering Employer's Federation, gaining experience of respondent work within the field of employment, before becoming Head of Employment at Taylor Willcocks solicitors.

Employment

Georgina has represented Claimants and Respondents in a range of final hearings and procedural hearings both in court, tribunal and EAT. She has advised and represented parties as sole counsel on the full range of employment disputes.

Georgina has particular experience in:

- Trade union recognition and all claims via the CAC;
- Strike and 'unlawful' inducement trade union law and strategy;
- Whistleblowing claims;
- individual discrimination claims for all protected characteristics, and covering direct, indirect, failure to make reasonable adjustments, harassment and victimisation;
- unfair and constructive dismissal;
- breach of contract;
- redundancy and consultation rights and obligations;
- enforcement of restrictive covenants in the High Court.

She has a special interest in the cross over between commercial and competition law, and their impact in the employment sphere.

She writes the age discrimination section of Bloomsbury Discrimination Law, and regularly speaks and write on industrial and individual employment law issues.

Off-payroll working (IR35)

Georgina has advised on IR35 in the pure tax context, but also brings a particular experience of contractual arguments on employment status arising from her allied employment law practice, for example the Addison Lee drivers case which is pending hearing in the Court of Appeal on a contractual basis which may change the direction of judicial travel on allegedly sham self-employment cases.

She also successfully acted for HMRC in relation to whether ex-footballer and television presenter Phil Thompson was an employee of Sky for tax purposes, and on a complicated case regarding the taxable status of loans to ex-employees following multiple transactions – in both cases succeeding as sole counsel against tax specialists who took Silk within a year or two of those cases.

Mediation

Georgina is a trained mediator, and has acted in numerous mediations. She has been praised for her ability to handle difficult individuals and sensitively but tenaciously push to achieve settlement.

Investigations

As a barrister with prior experience of working and managing in private practice, and in-house, Georgina brings a unique level of insight and maturity to her Investigations. This allows her to investigate with the utmost sensitivity, while weighing-up evidence in a considered, nuanced manner, not shying away from difficult issues.

Notable investigations in which Georgina has conducted include:

- An allegation of harassment against a senior partner of a prominent law firm;
- Allegations of homophobic harassment, alongside an increasing culture of homophobic taunting at work;
- Allegations of racial harassment by a team of managers, within a prominent multinational company.

Telecommunications

Georgina Hirsch is recognised as one of the rising stars in the Devereux team. Having previously worked in industry as a solicitor, she has readily slotted in as a secondee to assist telecos. She has appeared before the Competition Appeal Tribunal in the major Ethernet case (ex ante cost orientation obligations and Ofcom's dispute resolution powers) to be hearing in the Court of Appeal in 2017, and has advised on the BCMR 2016, the Electronic Communications Code and other regulatory issues
